BUENOS AYRES.

BRITISH TREATY—INTERPRETATION OF THE 13TH ARTICLE.

We demonstrated in our last, that the uniform interpretation of the Tribunals, contended for by Dr. Garcia, is a gratuitous assumption, and irrelevant withal. It is a case in which the Tribunals have no right to interpret, and no power to dictate. They are bound down to the letter and spirit of the article; and if any doubt occur, it can only be solved by a reference to the Contracting Parties.

In support of his views, Dr. Garcia appeals to the "explanation which he has oftner than once heard from the negotiator of the treaty;" and if we recollect aright the argument is also brought forward in the opinion of Dr. Insiarte, on which the new interpretation was founded. The decision of General Rosas, in the case of Dick versus Reid, clearly implies, that previously a different interpretation had prevailed; and fortunately there are facts that place this beyond all doubt.

It has been and is the custom for the British Consul to give the probate to British Wills; that is, he certifies whether they are formal and valid documents. This practice commenced during the residence of Sir Woodbine Parish, and during the lifetime, and in the presence of the Argentine Negotiator; and it is all important to attend to the terms in which these probates are expressed. We have seen them with the signatures of Sir Woodbine Parish, Mr. Griffiths, Mr. Hood, and the actual Vice-Consul With minor discrepancies they are all cast in a common mould; and as specimens we give two, by different hands, and on dates sufficiently distant.

On that of Reid, quoted by the Supreme Court, Mr. Griffiths, under date January 27th 1835, certifies as follows:—

"That the preceding Will [that of Reid] "has been duly entered in the Official Re-"gister of this Consulate, the same having "been drawn out, and duly executed, ac-"cording to the laws of Great Britain," &c.

Again, on the 24th July 1849, Mr. Hood certifies:—

"That the said Will or Testament is "drawn up in the manner and forms pre-"scribed by the English laws"—&c.

These of course were translated and submitted to the Tribunals; and with the interpretation Dr. Garcia attempts to establish in their favour, could they by any possibility have tolerated, accepted or sanctioned such probates or certificates? These however, and many such, were accepted, sanctioned and acted upon; because the new interpretation had not been recognised in practice: and that uninterrupted practice, during a term of 24 years, establishes a rule, that will require more ingenuity than has yet been brought to bear upon it, to invalidate or supersede.

These probates furnish a luminous comment on the spirit and intention of the article, while they coincide with its plain and literal acceptation. They prove that British Wills are founded on British law, drawn out according to British forms, and consequently intended to be carried out and executed by British authorities, without interference of the local Tribunals. This is what British Agents have contended, and contend for; and what British subjects residing here, under the guarantee of the Treaty of 1825, consider themselves entitled to as a perfect right.

With the new interpretation these probates would be an anomaly, and the uniform practice of 30 years, a greater anomaly still. Why did not the Argentine Negotiator, why did not the local Tribunals reclaim and protest against such exorbitant pretensions, against what they now affect to hold up as "a renunciation of local sovereignty," from the first? With such plain and undisguised assertion of the obnoxious principle, their apathy and imprevision are truly inexplicable; except on the hypothesis that the treaty was regarded as it is, and not as it might have been, or ought to be.

We had once occasion to consult a distinguished native lawyer on this very point, and we can never forget either his words or his manner. His reply was to the following effect.—

"It is an exorbitant right, and ought not "to have been conceded; and should an "opportunity occur for reconsidering the "treaty, no efforts should be spared to have "it suppressed or modified. Meanwhile "there is no doubt and can be no question, "as to the wording and meaning of the ar-"ticle; an opinion I am ready to certify "and defend, however galling to my feel-"ings, if called upon in my professional capacity so to do."

We respect this as a candid and consistent opinion; and can sympathise with the reservations it contains, and the susceptibilities it manifests. It may be an exorbitant right; but even exorbitant rights must be respected, till formally modified, and even then any modification agreed upon cannot have a retroactive effect. The thing is done, and should it import, as Dr. Garcia alleges, a partial "renunciation of local sovereignty," as specific compacts generally do, cannot be remedied in the manner he proposes.

On another point, we are positive, Dr. Garcia either misunderstands, or unaccountably misrepresents the pretensions of Mr. Parish, confounding two things that are essentially distinct. No one, we believe, has ever questioned, or can question the right of the local tribunals to judge and decide on the claims of those who invoke the quality of lawful creditors. This would be to place the executors of Wills, or the curators of intestate property appointed by the British Consul, in a more privileged condition than the respective owners were when alive; an absurdity so glaring that we cannot fancy its existence. All lawful claims, whether of the State or of individuals, are and must be allowed; and we would request Dr. Garcia to instance a case in which such a right has been denied.

It is the hereditary succession alone that the testator has a right to fix by his Will, and which the Tribunals, in terms of the 13th article of the treaty, have no right to alter or interfere with If there are pending contracts, mercantile partnerships, or lawful claims of any kind against the estate of the deceased, the Tribunals have an unquestionable right to enforce their liquidation and settlement, the same as they would have had against the person who contracted these liabilities during his lifetime. We repeat, it is the mere act of transmission or hereditary succession, that the British agents and the British residents reclaim as sacred and inviolable. A man cannot make a Will here to defraud his lawful creditors, any more than he could in England. The property changes owners or representatives without any interference of the local Tribunals, but never ceases for a moment to be subject to their jurisdiction. It is quite as responsible for all just and lawful claims in the hands of C. D. the legatee, as it was in the possession of A. B. the testator.

As regards lawful creditors, therefore, the supposition of Dr. Garcia is as unfounded, as the implied insinuation is injurious to the British Agent.

This brings us to the concluding paragraph of the official report. We respect the filial deference of Dr. Garcia; but we cannot accept it as an authoritative decision in a case of such importance: more especially as his opponent is also, by a rare coincidence, a son of the British Negotiator; whom we may suppose imbued with the general views, perhaps guided by the direct counsels, of his father. These conflicting authorities therefore destroy each other; and we are once more thrown back on the letter and spirit of the Treaty itself; an inquiry Dr. Garcia has declined altogether, and which we must also defer to a subsequent number.

Monthly Retrospect.

November should be the best business months of our year, as regards the despatch of manufactured goods. In this instance, so far as the local demand is concerned, it is a notable exception to the general rule. Very little has been done, even at the public auctions; and that little with a declared downward tendency in prices, that transfers profit and loss to the wrong side of the leger account. The summer demand, which is by far the most important, is once more irretrievably lost. The repeated Indian invasions on our Southern frontier, have not only damped the spirit of mercantile adventure, but plunged many families, that had become important consumers, in abject and hopeless indigence. Their effects are not local and isolated. They are beginning to be felt severely in the Capital, and must continue to be felt, for an indefinite period, to the remotest extremities of the State.

For the Interior Provinces and Paraguay a fair amount continues to be done, though hardly to the extent effected for October. Of course prices are regulated more or less by those that prevail in the local market. Withal these are now our best outlets, and less subject to the disturbing influences that so easily and frequently derange and paralyze the march of our local affairs.

According to the latest accounts, there is the prospect of an immediate rupture between Paraguay on the one hand, and the Confederate Provinces and Brazil on the other. We shall have occasion to treat of this more at length under a subsequent head. What its immediate effect may be on mercantile transactions here, it is difficult to predict. The more sanguine and adventurous may perhaps feel inclined to speculate on the probable result; whilst the cautions and the experienced are just as likely to curtail the amount of their ordinary operations.

But be its immediate effects what they may, we need have no doubt as to its ulterior ones. If intrigue, conspiracy, revolts, invasions, and civil war in all in all its detested forms, could promote commerce and social progress, verily we, with all the sister South American Republics, might ere this have been at the top of the ladder, or may soon hope to be to. One thing certain is, that the people employed in profitless wars, are so many hands withdrawn from useful and reproductive enterprises; leaving their families in temporary destitution, and sapping the foundations of national prosperity. The expenses incurred for the attack and the defence, are alike deductions from the funds that should support internal improvement, and foment foreign commerce. Vague and undefined as the danger still is, it has already produced a depreciation in our circulating medium; in other words, rendered local transactions more difficult and problematical. When such are the first fruits of a remote and contingent apprehension, we can only anticipate fresh and complicated disasters from the stern reality.

In the face of all this uncertainty, we have had a fair proportion of arrivals, and even with the prospect of an Octavian peace, the wholesale market is abundantly and superabundantly supplied.

We need scarcely add, that our monetary situation is far from satisfactory. Transactions in metallic are liquidated at a great sacrifice to the local dealer. With so little movement outstandings are got in very slowly; and during these last days several failures have been declared, though fortunately not of a very large amount.

Such is the general state of our own market, and by all accounts, that of the Rosario is hardly any thing better, whilst that of Montevideo is still gloomier, and if possible more prostrate and hopeless.

Articles of Daily Consumption.—The arrivals from Spain, the United States, Sardinia and Brazil have been considerably above a fair average. For causes already alluded to the supplies for our country stores have been partially suspended; and we fear many families that were fairly entitled to indulge in the comforts of civilized life, are now reduced to beef and water; a trial the more severe from the contrast with their late situation and prospects. At the same time, it must be confessed, that complaints of hard times are becoming rather general among a numerous class in the Capital; who have no choice but to limit their expenditure to their means. All these imply a diminished consumption; for which the extravagance and prodigality of the favoured few afford no adequate compensation. Even granting a fair amount to have been re-embarked and despatched for transit, it is pretty evident there must be a heavy stock accumulated in the general market. Wholesale prices have in general given way, and judging from the causes in operation, we consider a further reduction next to inevitable. Our wholesale storekeepers have shown much ingenuity in keeping up prices and regulating the course of their department of our import market. In fact they comprehend the principle of association, or rather perhaps of combination, better than most others; but we fancy they will now find a difficulty in dealing with a glutted market and a diminished supply.

Paraguay products, yerba and tobacco, are the articles that remain firmest; and should the apprehended rupture take place, it is not unlikely that some attempts may be made to create a monopoly of them, and raise the prices still higher.

Of building materials the stock on hand is very large; and there is at present no prospect of the active demand of last summer. The value of house property has fallen; and unless some unexpected change take place in the situation of the industrial classes, house rents must also come down; damping still more the spirit of improvement and enterprise.

Grain and flour are almost the only articles on which we think it might be safe to speculate. The prospects of the crops, owing to an almost unpredecented succession of heavy rains are to say the least extremely uncertain; and should they prove deficient, which we fear they are likely to do to a certain extent, we have famine prices staring us in the face: a state of things to which we are already in part accustomed. In the event of such a conflict, as but we can hardly help anticipating, will the Government and the Legislature, under the pretext of protection to agricultural interests, maintain the import duty on flour and grain? We dare not give a direct answer, either in the negative or affirmative; but we must add, that it is a point that demands immediate and serious attention. We have seen bread riots elsewhere, and we should be sorry to see them repeated in the streets of Buenos Ayres. To ward off such a danger no precautions are excessive.

Export Produce.—With the exception of wools, we have no stocks on hand of any kind; with prospects for the future as bleak and dreary as can be imagined; and if the gauchos in Entre Rios, Santa Fé and Corrientes are again embodied for the Paraguayan war, there may also be a temporary suspension of the supplies that have been arriving rather freely from these quarters. But at the present stage it is needless to speculate on eventualities; and therefore we shall close with a simple reference to the quotations of our export market.

Social and Political Aspect.—We cannot in candour and conscience say, that the situation has made any improvement during the past month. The invaders have retired from our territory, but nearly all with personal impunity, and instead of being retired to the interior of the Oriental State, are living we presume unwatched and unmolested, in the Capital, or in the towns upon the coast; and we can see only very slender guarantees that similar invasions may not be repeated any week or any day.

In Montevideo itself, a reaction appears to be taking place, that we hold to be incompatible with the existing order of things in this State. Of the Argentine refugees we may suppose the sympathies of a large proportion to lean to the cause of General Oribe; and if they assist him now in recovering the legal presidency, it is quite natural they should calculate on his countenance and aid, when the hours comes for reasserting their rights as Argentine citizens.

We have a sore there not to be healed up in the lifetime of the present generation. To have rejected the deed of amnesty, on the promulgation of the Constitution, as proposed by Deputy Billinghurst and Senator Anchorena, was a fatal blunder in policy; which it is now perhaps too late to remedy. It requires a vast majority to ensure the definitive triumph of a political party.

D. Juan Bautista Peña has gone to the Paraná, on a mission of reconciliation. He left on the 21st ult., the third anniversary of the invasion of Entre Rios by General Hornos. The Entre Rios papers of that date we find filled with inflamatory comments on that unfortunate movement; as if the proximate arrival of a plenipotentiary, and the necessity of mutual concessions were matters of indifference or contempt. Subsequently they have said in plain terms, that with Dr. [illegible] and Col. Mitre in the Ministry, all negotiation is fruitless. And as offsett to this gasconade, and to show that we can be saucy when the occasion offers, some one of our contemporaries retorts, hypothetically of course, that the presence of General Urquiza at the head of the Confederation, may be held on our part "an insuperable obstacle to any arrangement." Such dispositions, manifested without any reserve, leave us hardly any thing to hope from the mission Peña. The more probable result is, that an unsuccessful effort may lead to a formal and definitive rupture; on the consequences of which it would premature to speculate.

This brings us to the rumoured alliance of Brazil and the Confederate Provinces against the Government of Paraguay. It is said that the Imperial Envoy has stipulated to give the President 2½ million dollars, to equip a contingent of 3,000 men, to act in concert with an Imperial land and naval force; and that moreover there is a reserved stipulation, by which the Empire engages to guarantee the integrity of the Argentine territory.

If such stipulation exists, of which we have some doubts, it may, it must lead to endless complications; of which the navigation of the waters of the Paraná, with the consent of President Urquiza, and contrary to the views and wishes of the Government of this State, is likely to be one of the first, and the precursor of a long train of others.

When to these contingent, but apparently not very remote dangers from without, we add the present and positive difficulties that surround us, it must be allowed, that, as regards commercial prospects, the situation is any thing but promising. The repugnance of our peasantry to engage in the struggle with the Indians, is notorious. With nearly the whole of our disposable veteran force concentrated on the Southern frontier, we seem reduced to the defensive, and with only slender guarantees against other successful incursions. The public exchequer will be drained of its last available dollar before the 31st of December; and we fear the announced deficit of 1856, is likely to prove a stern reality. To dominate so untoward a situation would require greater union and unanimity than we can at present perceive.

ARTISTIC DISCOVERY.

So far back as May 1853, we noticed a new plan for teaching the piano forte, discovered, or perhaps rather invented, by Mr C. E. Soedling. That system has received the unqualified approbation of M. Thalberg, who pronounces it "a divine system;" and has given the author an autograph letter, of which the following is a literal translation.—

Buenos Ayres Novr. 18th 1855.

My Dear Mr Soedling,

I have carefully and conscientiously examined your new system for teaching the piano forte, and feel thoroughly convinced of its superiority. As it is based upon mathematical truths, its success appears to me certain, and I feel satisfied that it will be adopted in proportion as it becomes known. Your method must interest the pupil and can never fatigue him, and by it he may easily learn in six months, as much as is at present generally done in a year.

"I hope you will obtain a success equal to the merit of your enterprise, and that the whole world will very soon feel as convinced of that merit as I do.

Wholly Yours,

S. Thalberg.

Montevideo.

The news are the most disastrous and ominous. The streets from the 24th to the 29th, were the scene of a fratricidal struggle, in which 90 or 100 lives were sacrificed, and perhaps a larger number wounded.—The details are very vague, but the triumph was for the partisans of Generals Oribe and Flores. After a fruitless struggle their rivals had to surrender, and the principal leaders, with part of the troops, arrived here as refugees yesterday morning in the steamer packets. It is impossible to look forward to the complications that may ensue without a shudder of apprehension.

Te Deum of the Allies.—This august ceremony took place on the 29th and was numerously attended; the Representatives of the three Allied Nations presiding.

The Indians.—Nothing official published; but we know from private sources that their vanguard remained unmolested between Tandil and Dolores. It is said that a son of Calfucurá with an escort of 50 Indians, had made a visit to the Paraná. All these movements require to be narrowly watched. We trust Col. Olivieri will soon be able to join General Hornos with an important reinforcement. Other dangers are not wanting, but this is the first and greatest.

Fete Champere.—It is generally understood that it will take place on the 8th inst, which happens to be a holiday; and should the weather prove auspicious, it will doubtless be a gala day.

FALL OF SEBASTOPOL.

PROGRAMME for the celebration of the triumphs obtained in the Crimea, by the arms of the Allies, adopted by their countrymen resident in this State.

The memorable triumphs obtained in the Crimea by the arms of the Allies, have inspired their fellow-countrymen resident in this Capital, with the desire of celebrating these glorious events in a becoming manner, and for this purpose, they have appointed a Committee, charged to carry into effect, with the permission of the Government, the following programme.

1st. It being proper that we should offer up to the Lord of Hosts, a tribute of thanksgiving for the victory He has designed to concede to the Allies, a solemn TE-DEUM shall be performed, under the auspices of the Public Agents of the three Nations.

2d. This highest duty being performed, there shall be a fête champetre, [day and place to be duly announced] at which the citizens of the three Nationalities, without any distinction, shall be invited to attend; besides the special invitations to other parties that may be issued by the Committee.

3d. To perpetuate the memory of these glorious events, and give to this manifestation a character in keeping with the nature of the Eastern War, a war undertaken in in defence of justice, civilization, and humanity the surplus of funds collected, shall be devoted to some patriotic or benficent object.

Buenos Ayres, Nov. 23d. 1855.

On announcing the preceding programme, the undersigned Committee invites all the individuals of the three nationalities, who choose to contribute to its realization, to call at the residence of either of the undersigned, to present the amount they wish to contribute; it being understood that the Subscription List will be closed on the 5th December.

THE INFALLIBLE REMEDY!

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

EXTRAORDINARY CURE OF SORE LEGS.

Copy of a letter from Mr. Michael Hyatt, of Meerut, dated the 29th August, 1854.

To Professor Holloway,

SIR,—A man in my employ, named John Jones, was for sixteen years afflicted with the most inveterate ulcerous legs, which formed into large wounds, and were continually throwing out offensive matter, rendering him an object of horror to himself, and those around him. I must admit he was in a most shocking state, and it was only out of pity for the poor fellow that I retained him in my service. During the whole of this time, I consulted first one party and then another, in the hope of its being benefitted, but it was without effect; and in fact, it seemed to be only wasting money to obtain further advice, as the last party I consulted stated he could never be cured. However, five month ago, I put him under a course of your Ointment and Pills, and after continuing them regularly, for eleven weeks, his legs were completely sound, and he now enjoys the best of health in every respect. Common politeness has induced me to make you acquainted with these particulars, which you may make use of, if you feel disposed.

I am, Sir, your obedient Servant.

(Signed) MICHAEL HYATT.

DISEASES OF THE SKIN.—REMARKABLE CURE OF TWO CHILDREN.

Copy of a Letter from Mr. Henry Anderson, of Lucknow, E. I., dated the 30th of April, 1854.

To Professor Holloway,

SIR,—I have taken leave to address you, to thank you for the benefit my two children have derived from using your Ointment and Pills. For two years, each of them suffered most alarmingly from eruptions all over the body and limbs, it was quite a pain to wash them; and despite of all the advice I had from several surgeons they did not derive the slightest benefit, it was with some reluctance, that I was induced to give a trial to your Ointment and Pills, as I firmly believed nothing would eradicate the unsightly disfigurement, having spent upwards of £40 in medicine and advice for them. However, I put them under a course of your medicines, and the effect was wonderful, for by persevering with them; the eruptions gradually disappeared. Both of the children are now without a blemish, and enjoy the most robust health.

I remain, Sir, yours respectfully.

(Signed) HENRY ANDERSON.

ASTONISHING CURE OF ERYSIPELAS.

Copy of a Letter from Henry Brooks, Esq., of Simla dated the 22d of March, 1854.

To Professor Holloway,

SIR,—Having been almost a martyr from the effects of Erysipelas, and tried every remedy likely to benefit me without success; I determined to make use of your invaluable Ointment and Pills, although when I commenced with them, I certainly was in a most deplorable state, the whole of my body being covered with large purple blotches, quite unsightly in addition to the unpleasant feeling of itching and and burning, which affected me both night and day, rendering my life a misery to me, as well as all around so severe was the attack. After taking your Pills and using your Ointment for a few weeks, a visible improvement took place, and I felt considerably better, at the lapse of three months, every symptom of my disorder disappeared; and I now enjoy the best of health; thanks to you and your medicines.

I remain, Sir, your most obedient Servant,

(Signed) HENRY BROOKS

WONDERFUL CURE OF A BAD BREAST.

Copy of a letter from Mr. Archibald Henderson, dated Cuttack, February 17th, 1854.

To Professor Holloway,

SIR,—I have to acknowledge an inestimable benefit my wife has derived from the use of your Ointment and Pills. Ten months ago, just after the weaning of our last child, her left breast broke out into ulcerous sores, rendering the same one frightful running wound: and as a matter of course, she laboured under nervous debility, loss of appetite, and general ill-health. I had recourse to a variety of medicines for the cure of this horrible disorder, but every thing she took had a neutral effect on her; at last, I resolved upon procuring a quantity of your Ointment and Pills, which very quickly produced a change for the better, and by persevering with them for three months, she was perfectly cured.

I am, Sir, yours most respectfully,

(Signed) ARCH. HENDERSON.

COACHES--COACHES.

DON LUIS SAUZE coachmaker, having returned from Europe, has the honor of acquainting his former customers, and the public in general, that he has reopened his establishment at No. 59 Calle San Martin, (formerly Calle 25 de Mayo) under the firm of Sauze and Rivadavia; where there is on hand a large assortment of elegant Parisian coaches of the most approved manufacturers for sale, to exchange for used vehicles, or for hire by the day, month or trip, as may suit customers.

He also undertakes to construct or repair vehicles, for which he has brought an assortment of the best mate ials. He can likewise bring out on commission any kind of vehicle, having made arrangements for the purpose with the most accredited establishments; and to facilitate selection, can show drawings and designs of the most fashionable and approved modes: holding himself responsible for the damages they may sustain or the repairs they may require; assuring those who may employ him, that no pains will be spared to merit their patronage.

N. B. Having learned from several parties, that our immediate neighbour D. Pedro Pegue, who lives in the house of D. Prudencio Rosas, has misled many persons, who were in quest of our establishment telling them that he could undertake the same, we request particular attention to our address.
